The Great Republic, Captain Donaldson,

The work on the bridge, and pile-driving through the swamps of White river, progresses with even greater rapidity than was authopated by Mr. Graenlaw. There is a strong rivalry developed among the several contractors on different sections of the work in the awamp. Con-tractors are professional men. If they win character for rapidity of action, and for great energy and skill, they are always preferred by railroad builders, and secure better prices for their work. Such is the zeal of Mr. Greenlaw's employes that their labors are never suspended because of bid weather. Through ice and snow, and always in the water, their engines are never still, and the Little Rock road will soon be an accomplished fact.
